VICTORIA PURMAN AUTHOR EVENT

We had a fantastic turnout for our May author event with South Australian bestselling author Victoria Purman. Victoria's presentation based on her new book The Nurses' War was engaging and interesting, particularly given the historical significance of the experiences of Australian nurses in World War 1. It was a beautifully hosted event at Peter Lehmann Wines Cellar Door, and a fitting author event as part of History Month.

The Nurses War by Victoria Purman

Featured in our recent author event with Victoria Purman, this book pays tribute to the brave women who served with courage and compassion. Set in WW1 it tells how the first Australian Auxiliary Hospital was established, donated to the military forces and originally intended for 60 beds. As the patients kept coming in waves from the Western front, the wards were forced to expand. Sister Cora Barker arrives from South Australia as an experienced nurse, but nothing can prepare her for the challenges of caring for so many men injured in battle. Overcoming their own exhaustion, homesickness and distress at what they see, these girls cope and even find love amidst the pain. Cora's mission to save the diggers by providing a little piece of home as they recover is a testament to her service and sacrifice. Well researched, this moving, thoughtful and sensitively handled story offers a good read for those who enjoy a historical tale based on true events.

All that is Secret by Patricia Raybon

A cold-case murder story set in Denver, USA in 1923. Following the inspiration of her favourite literary hero Sherlock Holmes, a young black girl named Annalee sets out to hunt for clues to find her estranged father's killer, but puts herself in great danger as much of the city is dominated by the Klux Klan. She encounters the prejudice and beliefs of the time as deep secrets and possible motives are uncovered - coming from those who are the powerful leaders of local society make her realize she could also soon become the next murder victim ... an intriguing new story which combines history, suspense and a touch of romance.
