

Editor's Report for April:

Hello and welcome to the fourth edition of our Tungkillo Times newsletter. We would like to thank all you avid readers and the beautiful and kind comments since Christine and I have put our hands up to do this newsletter. Neither of us have ever done this before, and the response and encouraging words have been positive. We hope everyone had a safe and Happy Easter and a great and well-deserved break to catch up with family and friends.

March saw the Easter Twilight Market which was the last until daylight savings rolls around again. A very big thank you to Kerry for all her time and effort in organising the markets and enjoy your time off. We hope the winner of the giant Bunny had a very chocolatey Easter.

We have our weekly Coffee and Chat where anyone in the community is more than welcome to come to the hall, have a coffee and chat with afternoon tea provided, at no cost.

Let's not forget our annual Monster Auction where we raise funds for the hall. This year the monies raised will go towards greening up around the hall. We need to raise more funds to achieve this, so this may take a little time for it to happen, but we are working on this project.

This month is also a special month with ANZAC Day on April 25th. A lovely resident has kindly asked us to put in a personal letter that was written by a mother to her son fighting overseas. This is a heartwarming and raw letter that comes straight from a mother's heart to her son.

We would like to thank Reid Printing for coming on board and offering to print the newsletter now, and we hope that the community likes the new booklet format. (Please let us know what you think). Reid Printing is a family owned and run business. The family live locally and wanted to help us. To keep costs to a minimum, we would like to offer anyone that receives a hard copy, if you would be interested in receiving a digital copy instead. Please forward your email address to us and we will add you to our mailing list.

The Tungkillo Times is a community newsletter and we would like to thank everyone who has contributed so far, but if there is anyone out in our community (not just Tungkillo, but surrounding towns) and would like to advertise a community event that helps the district please email the Tungkillo Times at tungkillogazette@gmail.com. Working together helps all communities grow together.

Kind Regards, Christine and Sue

Ps. We have had some vandalism issues at the hall in recent days. We pray that it does not continue.

We would like to warmly introduce to the Tungkillo community, the newest member of our Progress Club Committee, Michelle Schumann. With her knowledge and background in social networking, she will be a significant asset to the Tungkillo community.

The RSL began life as the Returned and Services League of Australia. The league was formed in 1916 to create a unified approach to repatriation facilities and medical services for those returning from WW1.

A meeting of State representatives on 6th June, resolved to form the Returned Sailors and Soldiers Imperial League of Australia.

It was their intention to lobby for better benefits, medical treatment and welfare of veterans and serving members of our Defence Force. The League soon became, and remains, the nation's largest ex-service organisation.

RSL was formed on 16th June 1916.

Formerly called

1916 – Returned Sailors and Soldiers Imperial League of Australia

1940 – Returned Sailors, Soldiers and Airmen Imperial League of Australia

1965 – Returned Services League of Australia

The League objectives remain relatively unchanged.

Vision: To help Australia's Veterans and Defence families enjoy better opportunities in all aspects of their lives.

Mission: To provide on behalf of Australia's Veterans and Defence families, national advocacy, supportive and coordinated national programs and activities, more funding and optimised management of the RSL brand.

ANZAC dawn service will be held at

Mt Pleasant, at the Soldiers Memorial Hall

Mannum, at the War Memorial

This letter was offered to us by a local resident (a letter from Mother to Son, WW1)

KERRY WILL BE DELIGHTED TO ANSWER YOUR QUESTIONS,

Born and raised in England, Bill spent several years in the Mediterranean, courtesy of the RAF. Emigrating to Australia with his family in 1970, Bill instantly fell in love with the rugged beauty of the South Australian scenery. For many years, while fishing the coast of South Australia, his deep respect of natural wonders developed and grew.

In the 1990's, Bill discovered that he had a talent for painting and once paint touched canvas, he has never looked back.

Most of Bill's paintings are either sea or landscapes, featuring the Australian bush and particularly the Flinders Ranges. Bill has also had great success and enjoyment with his paintings of sand dunes.

Previously, Bill lived south of Adelaide in the quiet suburb of Woodcroft, close to the Onkaparinga Gorge. There, he gained much of his inspiration in quiet, long bush walks through this area.

Twenty years ago, a move to the peaceful town of Tungkillo in the Adelaide Hills created new directions, plus new images, new ideas and additional challenges. The Flinders Ranges became a drawcard and an Artist's paradise.

As well as Australia, Bill has had work hanging in many private collections in countries such as Canada, Germany, Texas USA and England.

The following South Australian Galleries have exhibited his work: -

Beach Street Gallery Grange S.A.

*Jillian Cryder Gallery
West Beach S. A.*

*Lombard Gallery

Bill has also held solo exhibitions of his work at the Lombard Gallery, Cos Restaurant in Leigh Street - Adelaide, Victor Harbour and Wrigley Park Glenelg.

Bill has now retired from painting due to age and unsteady hands.

Everyone is welcome to come along on Sunday, April 28th, to admire Bill's talent as an artist.

Bill's artwork can be purchased on the day.

Trials and tribulations of the Tungkillo region in the early years Part 1

Earthquakes and storms:

Going back through early residents in the area, from their personal records there has been noted that a severe storm came through on the night of 8th June 1874 waking up residents with a loud noise, one of the original residents named Henry Hobbs was woken from his sleep and investigated this loud noise and found on his return from looking around, he noticed that his couch was covered in around 600 bricks, a very lucky escape for his family. (Possibly from a slight earthquake). November of 1913, Tungkillo had a week of fierce winds causing much damage, then on 2 December of the same year, a week of extremely high temperatures followed with a record temperature of maximum of 45.5°C.

Since proclamation of South Australia in 1837 the state has experienced at least 15 earthquakes with readings of magnitude of 5 or greater. It has been established by the Seismological Committee that 81 earthquakes were noted by scanning many early newspaper articles and diaries of landowners in the 19th century is our best knowledge.

The Palmer Faultline is most westerly of a series of the north-south-trending faults with west-side up displacement. The Palmer Fault is marked by brecciated rock (meaning: break down into angular fragments) that Kanmantoo Group exposed in a disused quarry in the hanging wall of the fault at the western outskirts of Palmer.

It has been recorded that Tungkillo felt the impact of a 3.1- 3.5 magnitude earthquake on 25 February 1890. This one was claimed to be of moderate shock. Back in the early days they didn't have the equipment that they have today, so it was recorded as an estimate.

There have been other recorded earthquake shocks within the local district.

Murraylands on Wednesday 29 September 1875 near Palmer with a magnitude of 3.1 – 3.5 around 10.45 am. Mount Barker 7 July 1885 Magnitude of 4.2 at 1.38 am Epicentre. Tremors were felt as are as Taillem Bend. Nairne 8th May 1880 at 10.50 am. Woodside 2 November 1897 2.9 magnitude. Murray Bridge 28 November 1897 3.1 Magnitude about 10.30pm .

Fire

Tungkillo hasn't been immune to fires in the district. In the days before fire trucks residents rely on one another to tell the signs of rising smoke and raising the alarm. Willing hands-on horses and horse and buggy and any means that they could, sometimes traveling over rough terrain to the source of fire. Just before sunrise on 24 March 1869, Mary Bax began her kitchen duties at Terlinga Station when she smelt smoke. Alerting the employees, they ran down to the shearing shed, which was across the road, to find the inside was all on fire with flames going through the middle of the highest part of the roof. Penned up nearby was a mob of sheep that escaped the closed in fenced area and fled to the hills, east of tungkillo towards Rockleigh way. It took four days to retrieve all the sheep. Evidence from shepherds, other station hands and a passerby from a 2-day drinking binge in South Petherton 's District Hotel took to the local court where the jury listened for 4 hours and another 1 hour to digest. No one was charged, this finished up as just another unsolved incendiary action, the district took home consolation in the fact that the match bearer must have been an animal lover for the gate to the paddock had been opened before the flames consumed the sheep. (pg 185-186 The quiet waters by)

The Mount Barker Courier of January the 8th 1886 reported that a huge fire had devastated the Tungkillo area that burnt over the two days on 5-6 January. With stock loss, shedding, crops, haystacks, and pigs all perished. See pg 263

On January 28th, 1900, another fire engulfed the Tungkillo area this time starting at Hynes sawmill between Blumberg (Birdwood) and Mt Pleasant, At Terlinga station everything was burnt but the home was saved, the fire passed the township of Tungkillo and was heading towards Palmer. Over 12 000 acres were burnt altogether and many fences destroyed, valuable grass land was also lost. Charles Hunter was charged with lighting the fire at Mr Hynes sawmill. The defendant who is a swagman has been caution many times not to light a fire out of the river bed, but the defendant persisted and lit the fire for his cup of tea, this eventually caught on a dry log after he left it unattended, although he thought it was out when he left, strong winds fanned it into flames which spread quickly. The courts fined him 5 pounds or 3 months. Hunter was taken the Adelaide Goal.

Farmers had to contend to bushfires that were started by lighting from wild spring storm. Travelling drovers, carriers, and hawkers also caused considerable outbreaks after leaving fire campfires semi-extinguished or dropping their used lucifer matches on the ground. With harvest finished, farmers burned off the stubble, if fires were left unquenched in hollow logs this could escalated with strong winds, and many times escaping from the burn off itself. Many times, the grain stacked near homes or barns was quite often engulfed in flames and farmers losses were great.

Floods

South Australia has a history of floods and droughts since it was settled in 1836. Settlers had to contend with the changing flows to a river that was naturally prone to seasonal flooding. Tungkillo and the surrounding area of Tungkillo has not been immune to flooding since early times of settlement. Wild storms especially through spring were not unheard-of, washouts and the precipitation of heavy rains was not uncommon in this area, people found these trying times, but with the help of the community they soldiered through. Flooding also did serious damage to the crops and paddocks washout, posts, rails, logs and trees could be seen taken away by the flood waters and washed away.

From mid – 1866 John Hendry's foundry at Totness (now a part of Mount Pleasant) had the job of producing not only small agriculture machinery, but had the job of producing, planning, and engineering to build a bridge that crossed the Harrison Creek (between Palmer and the Tungkillo Mine in the foothills now on private land). On 16th March 1867 the Adelaide Observer (Adelaide Newspaper) reported that John Hendry's manufacture an iron bridge girder that could withstand the weight of up to 15 tons of road traffic.

During the extremely wet winter season of 1867, tragedy struck after the bridge opening for all travellers to cross over the Harrison Creek to continue towards Palmer and further afield to Mannum. Mrs Margret Walker the 3rd publican of the South Petheron District Hotel (now the retired Tungkillo Hotel) warning travellers of the hazardous conditions ahead as the water was up. Actual words found in The Quiet Waters By the Mount Pleasant District 1843-1993 By Reg Butler go as:

The bridge seems to have been constructed for fine weather and is quite inadequate to carry off the waters of a flood. It is very strongly built – two stone buttresses, with the roadway resting upon iron girders or tubes. There being no wing walls and the arches are very low, the waters made a clean sweep over the embankment, carrying everything before them and leaving a yawning chasm, into which to was more pleasant look at then to drive on a dark night. We therefore had to make a hazardous descent from this embankment and from the creek a little higher up the stream.

Later with appropriate modification, the Harrison Creek bridge set up again for business. The buttress remains downstream from the present crossing - but this project is remembered as one of the earliest known efforts of local engineers. Please remember this is now on private property and please respect the owner of this land.

Monday 7th October 1867 Adelaide Observer

2 to 3 culverts on the Mannum Road being carried away by the flood waters, causing a deviation of traffic, and stationmasters and mason are doing all they can to repair the damage. The district road -particularly that from the township to Mount Pleasant are in a very dangerous state, such flood having never been known before in the neighbourhood.

Saturday 19th August 1905 Adelaide Observer

Meeting held in the District Hotel on Saturday evening to discuss re-erecting of the bridge on Bald Hill Road which was recently destroyed by flood and the road conditions.

Friday 31 March 1922 Adelaide Observer

Government department that inspection of the Tepko to Mount Torrens Roadshows that it has been completely washed out by floods and is impossible to replace on its present alignment. It will be necessary for the council to arrange with the adjoining owners for the purchase of necessary land to construct a deviation.

Friday 7th September 1923 Adelaide Observer

The resent heavy rains were responsible for numerous complaints concerning the state of the roads around Tungkillo – Rockleigh-Mount Torrens after heavy rains.

Coffee and Chat

Since February of this year (2024) The Tungkillo Progress Club Inc is inviting the residents, surrounding communities and visitors to our town on Monday afternoons from 1 – 2.30 pm up at our hall (not public holidays) to come and have a cup of coffee or tea and afternoon eats. Come and have a chat, even play a game of checkers if you want, or even bring along your craft to share. Maybe someone will be interested in seeing what you do.

We decided to put this little get together for we understand that due to cost of living, people maybe finding financial stress could force many people into isolation and loneliness from their friends and family.

Social isolation and loneliness are concerns for everyone in our community, people may feel house bound due to financial stress and this could impact on their mental, physical health and impact on your emotional distress and even worse case, suicide.

So please don't feel isolated – no money is required to come and have a chat. Just turn up, everyone is welcome.

THE PRESIVATOR

My darling has a loving heart,
Far more kind than wise.
I'm not here to criticise!
Everything around our home
Is cherished through old age,
The depth of her compassion is Impossible to gauge.

A toothless old ewe in the paddock,
Wonky on her feet,
Alas, it's not decayed enough,
To transition to pet meat!
No chook that ceases laying,
Need fear the hov'ring axe,
The horse that needs a full-time vet
Can doze on and relax.

But the thing that rattles me the most
Is not the "Must Feed" herds,
It's the five a.m. reveille
Provided by the birds.
I say, "Don't make 'em dependant,
Just feed them once a week,
But her hearing is selective,
I may as well not speak!

I WILL admit, I love birds too,
But I hate the little bastards when they massacre
my fruit!
All year long I tend those trees,
Fertilise, prune and weed,
I expect a bountiful harvest,
Far more than we need.

My darling freezes, cooks, preserves,
And some to give away,
I couldn't hope to eat it all
If I had four meals a day.
Chutneys, sauces, Marmalades,
We're putting up more shelves,
We could maybe feed the needy,
And still eat some ourselves.

All summer long the kitchen smells
Of wondrous home preserves,
I just peel and core and dice,
And don't get on her nerves.
Mid-summer and she's making SOUP!
In the freezer, sev'ral deep,
I wonder, are we saving much?
(electricity's not cheap).

But – into the back-up freezer,
All labelled, super neat,
Unless we have an outage,
We'll have stacks of stuff to eat.

I'm anchored to the kitchen,
Arms buried in the sink,
The steaming pots stand on the stove,
GOD, I need a drink!

But My Darling cannot bear to waste
One thing that I produce,
So many Citrus windfalls –
So much Orange Juice!

The Preservator doesn't throw away
Them fruit of vine or tree,
My hope is that her magic
Will also work on me.

So, rolled-up sleeves, and sweaty brow,
Hope not for an idle hour,
My lover will preserve it all –
Unless we lose the power!
